

Question1

Why did the rural people set up the roadside stand? Was it successful? Give reasons.

Answer

The rural people set up the roadside stand in front of their old house at the edge of the road to sell various country produce to have some income. But their effort remained unsuccessful as no motorist from the city bothered to stop and buy their things.

Question2

How did the village folk mar the landscape?

Answer

They marred the landscape by putting their pathetically pliable stand at the edge of the road, by putting signboards with words and letters written wrongly.

Question3

What do they keep for sale in their shed?

Answer

They keep for sale wild berries in wooden measurements and crooked necked golden squash with silver warts on their external side.

Question4

Why do some motorists stop at the stand?

Answer

Some motorists stop at the roadside stand to inquire about the produce; some to ask the route; some for taking a back turn; some even stop to inquire if they would sell gas. But unfortunately no one would purchase the farm produce.

Question5

What would happen to the village folks if they were made live near to the theatre?

Answer

In the name of their economic upliftment if theatre and multiplexes are opened near their house; they will only lose their sleep; but the real beneficiary would be the owner of the theatres and multiplexes.
